- H. PromotionofUtilityModelsinAfrica
- 26. Theutilitymodelprotectioncanbeeffectivelyutilizedforthepromotionofindigenous technologiesinAfrica.ThedefinitionprovidedinSection3 *ter*oftheHarareProtocolreads asfollows:
  - "Anyform,configurationordispositionofelementsof someappliance,workingtools and implements of everyday use electrical and electronic circuitry, instrument, handicraft mechanism or other objector part thereofins of a rast hey are capable of contributing some benefits or neweffectors a vingintime, energy or labour or improving the hygienic or socio physiological working conditions by means of new configuration, arrangement or device or a combination thereof and a industrially applicable."
- 27. Theessentialcomponentsofthisdefinitionrel atetomodificationsofexistingstateof theart. This innovative process starts with the study of technological information contained in patent documents. This study has the effect of stimulating creative thinking and enhancing the prospects of an innovative effort. In this area, patent documents can be of great help in identifying appropriate technology that meet the needs of the current level of our technology. The importance of utility models can also be seen from the following advantages that it of fers:
  - theyrelatetotheprotectionofeverysimpleinvention;
  - theinventionssteprequirement is usually very low and the requirement could be locally determined;
  - thefeesareaffordable.

III. CONCLUSION

29. Itisnowwellappreciatedthatpercapitaeconomicgrowthofnations, especially in the last 50 years, havedramatically been driven upward, more by innovation nthan by aggregate capital investment. Natural resources, such as oil and gas reserves, solid sminerals, etc., no longer guarantee economic prosperity and real wealth in this highly technical and globalized world. We alth is now engineered by innovation. This holds a clear less on developing countries that pintheir hopes for economic development on natural resources.
